Salary and Tax

TAKE-HOME PAY STATEMENT

Tax year 2026
Amounts per year

Prepared for an employee earning $35,000 a year in British Columbia.

INCOME

Gross pay — $35,000
Your salary before any deductions — $35,000 a year, the number on your offer letter.

PAYROLL PROGRAMS — taken before income tax

CPP — Canada Pension Plan — - $1,874
5.95% of earnings between $3,500 and $74,600. Its enhanced slice is deductible, which lowers your taxable income below.

EI — Employment Insurance — - $571
1.63% of earnings up to $68,900. Funds job-loss, parental and sickness benefits.

INCOME TAX

Taxable income — $34,685
Gross minus the deductible part of CPP. Income tax is worked out on this, not on your gross.

Federal income tax — - $2,044
14% on all of your taxable income — it stays in the lowest band — less credits for the basic personal amount, CPP, EI and the Canada employment amount.

British Columbia tax after credits — $1,083
British Columbia brackets from 5.6%, less credits for the basic personal amount, CPP and EI.

BC tax reduction credit — - $366
Up to $690, phasing out at 3.56% of net income above $25,570.

British Columbia income tax — - $717
The provincial total: the lines above, added up.

TOTAL

Total deductions — - $5,207
Everything taken off the top: income tax, CPP and EI.

Yearly	$35,000.00	$5,206.56	$29,793.44

EFFECTIVE TAX RATE

7.9%

The share of your whole income that goes to income tax — your true average.

TRUE MARGINAL RATE

29.2%

What your next $100 loses to tax, CPP and EI. On your next $1,000 raise you'd keep about $708 — a raise never lowers your take-home.

Employment income only, single filer resident in British Columbia on Dec 31, 2026. Basic credits only (no RRSP, dependant or tuition). Validated against TaxTips.ca and Wealthsimple, October 2026. An estimate, not tax advice.
